UK Outlook for Monday 13 Sep 2021 to Wednesday 22 Sep 2021:
Monday is expected to be mostly dry with cloudier conditions south and east, and brighter further west. Scattered, mostly light showers are still possible, with a chance of heavier rain in the southwest. Settled and largely dry conditions are then expected to continue through the start of next week with variable cloud and some decent clear and sunny spells, although perhaps cloudier in the far north and northwest with rain at times. Probably turning more unsettled from the southwest later in the week, with rain or showers perhaps turning heavy and thundery. Some regions, especially in the north and east, could remain fine and dry. Temperatures near normal to rather warm, although some cool nights are likely, especially at first with rural ground frosts possible.
